used to lay longitudinally disposed buried fiber optic or metallic cable. A buried fiber optic cable may be laid down in shallow trenches on the land or in deep water troughs. A metallic cable may be disposed in deep trenches. In either case, it is desirable to fully bury the cable to protect it from the weather, and from damage by digging or cutting tools used to lay the cable. The cable should be reliably and completely fully buried for protection from damage. Some tools are capable of laying and burying fiber optic cable by lifting the cable at the back end of the tool. Such tools are often called backhoe type tools. One such tool is described in the brochure titled "Directional Drilling Machine continues, more Americans are living in the homes of friends, family and neighbors, and some are being quarantined and forbidden to leave. In these quarantined or lockdown conditions, Americans need to consume less. When it comes to the coronavirus, it is actually never too early to get ready.

We are currently a few weeks out from New York City's mandatory shelter-in-place order, and many other states and cities are following suit in near real time. Whether mandated by law or not, by the time we've seen an increase in the number of coronavirus cases, it's usually because the public and the medical professionals have been hard at work educating people about how to stay safe. In these early days, before people are living at home and under house arrest, it's important to think about protecting yourself and your family. The less you consume, the better. Take a look at the chart below, which represents all of the coronavirus cases as of March 19: The most important factor when it comes to staying safe and protecting your health is to practice good hygiene. That means washing your hands often with soap and water, keeping your hands away from your face

As of now, there is no way to install windows, but you can still use YUMI to make a bootable image of Windows 7 or 8. It may seem like a daunting task, but this is really easy to do.

Q: PHP - Fixed array example Consider a scenario with an array (this is fictitious) `$a = array(1, 2, 3);` How do I perform a fixed array (C++ syntax) on this array? `$x = $a[0..2];` I want this to have the same effect as doing `$x = $a[0..2]; $a = $a[2..];`

A: Here is what I would do: `$new_array = array(); foreach($a as $val){ if(in_array($val, $new_array)) continue; $new_array[] = $val; }` Note that the values of `$new_array` are not the same as `$a`, they are references to the same array, but that shouldn't cause any problems. A: $x = array_slice($a, 0, 2); and I don't think he was so impressed by it. But, at least it was a good
