The bill, known as the "Holding Federal Overreach in Place Act," would prevent courts from enforcing any new federal gun laws, including the recently passed federal ban on assault weapons. As MassLive reported Thursday, both the House and the Senate already have approved versions of the bill, but the House bill passed Thursday includes some minor changes, mostly to ensure that the bill would remain effective even in the event that the U.S. Congress enacts stricter gun laws. The bill was backed by the Republican Speaker of the Massachusetts House, Robert DeLeo, as well as Governor Charlie Baker, who supports the idea that federal gun laws preempt state law. "We need to send a message to Washington, D.C., that no new federal gun laws will be tolerated," Baker said. "Massachusetts will not sit idly by as our rights are trampled upon by the federal government." But Republican House Leader Brad Jones, who opposed the bill, said it is a signal to the federal government that gun control laws passed by the state should be upheld. "A state that goes against its own constitution is just as bad as a federal government that does against the Constitution," Jones said. An attempt to enshrine gun control in the state constitution in 2017 was blocked by court action. Joel Berg, a spokesman for the National Rifle Association, said in

Monitor Off is a small software application developed specifically for helping you put your monitor into the power saving mode with the aid of simple clicks. It can be installed on all Windows versions out there. How it works: It takes nothing more than a fast and basic installation process where you have to press on a few 'Next' buttons in order to bring the task to an end. You may opt for placing a shortcut of Monitor Off on your desktop on or other location that you find it suitable for running the program with ease. The icon on the desktop can be used to immediately switch to power saving mode without having to set up any other additional configuration parameters. A help manual is not included in the package, only a 'Readme' file that provides some extra details about the configuration process. Tests have pointed out that Monitor Off carries out a task pretty quickly. It is friendly with system resources so you do not have to worry that it affects the overall performance of your computer. There's support for several configuration settings, but they can be tweaked only via the command-line console. You need to have some previous skills into inputting commands in the CMD environment. Monitor Off offers you the possibility to make the tool work only during certain hours of the day. You may input the following syntax in the command-line console '/T:hhmm-hhmm,' where 'hhmm' represents the start and/or end time values. For example, you can make the utility activate the power saving mode only between 2AM and 6AM by entering the following command: '/T:0200-0600.' Final observations: To sum things up, if you are looking for nothing more than a simple software solution for helping you activate the power saving mode on the fly, you may give Monitor Off a try and see what it can do for you.
