Ample Sound CableGuru Bundle 2019-20 is a bundle of guitar and bass cables. The first bundle includes 8 cables for acoustic and electric guitars with a stereo cable and an audio cable. It also contains a 3-pin microphone cable and a 50 .Users of a computer system typically input data and instructions to the computer system using a keyboard or other input device. When the computer system is to perform a predefined function, the computer system may output results of the function and/or provide other output to a user. The output may be, for example, in the form of a printed page, a display on a graphical user interface (GUI), audible sounds, and/or any combination of these and other possible output types. In order to increase the speed and/or efficiency with which the computer system can execute a function, the computer system may be configured to make the function faster by preloading an executable portion of the function into an internal memory (e.g., a Random Access Memory (RAM)). Once the executable portion of the function is loaded into the internal memory, the computer system may execute the function without having to retrieve the executable portion from its source, such as the hard disk drive or another non-volatile storage device. The capability to load an executable portion of a function into the internal memory of a computer system has been applied to a class of functions (known as a classifier) that classifies input data into one of a plurality of output categories. The input data is received in a classification mode and the output categories in a classification mode are provided to the user. The computer system will then output data to an output device based on an output category selected by the user. The user may invoke the classifier by selecting one or more of the output categories from a graphical user interface (GUI) on the computer system. For instance, the user may click a button corresponding to the desired output category. Once the user has invoked the classifier, the user may input one or more data objects (e.g., a document, an email, a file, etc.) into the computer system for classification. The data object may include a classification identifier of a data object (e.g., an identifier of an email recipient) and/or a data object identifier (e.g., an identifier of an email). Once the data object is received by the computer system, the computer system may invoke the classifier to classify the received data object into one of the output categories by matching the classification identifier or the
